Phoenix craigslist pets

A lot of us have too many things, or things we don't need or use anymore. So what do we do with this thing? Sell it and make money online. Craigslist used to be the first stop to do so, but things have changed. Here are 11 best Craigslist alternatives to help you sell your stuff, in no particular order. Facebook MarketplaceLetlegoSwapGeebodeclutr or Music MagpiePoshMarkMardVintedCartedCarouseValeLathredUpInstagram Face Marketplace - Website - Google Play - App Store If you haven't already bought or sold something in Facebook Marketplace, we should be surprised. Consider how many people buy your local newspapers. Now consider how many people in your area are on Facebook. Chances will have far more from your neighbors on Facebook than buying local papers. That alone makes Facebook an excellent Craigslist alternative to selling your stuff. Check how to get great deals on Facebook Marketplace to get more ideas If you are a member of local market groups on Facebook, you can simultaneously post them. Facebook Marketplace is a completely free service too. Payments, shipping, and pickup are your responsibility to arrange for. You can use Facebook Pay though. Chill - Website - Google Play - App Store Convenience is the strong Secondary point. With the app on your phone, you can take a picture of the article and post it directly on the site in under a minute. Currently in over 100 million downloads, Sego is very popular. User profiles can be verified and rated. This helps to make sure you're dealing with someone renamed. Being able to help you make sure you get a good price. Let Reveal use artificial intelligence and computer vision to determine what your article is with estimated cost and sell time based on similar lists. Lists are free, but there are fee-based options to help you sell your items faster. How you want to be paid and how the customer becomes the item is up to you to arrange for. Swappa – Website – Google Play Swappa is a Craigslist alternative that focuses on electronics such as smartphones, tablets, and more in the US. You can list your electronics for free, but a fee can get built into your pricing. Technically, that means the buyer pays the fee, but it's about the same as design. Swappa has a non-junk junk policy. If the item doesn't work, is in rough shape, have a split screen or is killed, they will not list it. This will work in your favor as a seller because the buyer is already expecting something solid. Swappa even runs the Electronic Serial Number (ESN) check on all listed items with an ESN. An ESN is a permanent serial number prohibiting the unique set of this specific device. You list your items, Swappa process the payment via PayPal, and then you ship your items to the customer. There's also the local Swappa that is serving the largest US city. This provides the opportunity to arrange the local customer and you to arrange pickup and be paid directly by the buyer. Geebo - Geebo website is a classic type of classic ad in craigslist. Where it differs is that every post checked by someone helps ensure it's worth looking at. Geebo doesn't list what the criteria are for passing the check, but the site is still around after 10 years. They have to do something right. Currently, Geebo only serves the US in more than 160 communities. Geebo is another site where payment and item delivery or pickup is up to you to arrange for. Decluttr or MusicMagpie website – Decluttr or MusicMagpie Google Play – Decluttr or MusicMagpie App Store – Decluttr or MusicMagpie Decluttr is the US site and Magpie Music is the UK site for selling your cell phones, games, books and other devices. They function more like a design shop than a ranked ad though. Use the app or enter the barcode of your item and will give you an instant price estimate. They'll send you a package that you put your items in and chips. If you're sending 10 items or more, the shipping is free. Then Decluttr checks on your device, ensures all personal data is drying, and then sends you payment by storage direct, check, or PayPal. The payout may be not as big as what you might get sold your stuff on your own. But it's a quick way to get it out of your place. PoshMark – Website – Google Play – App Store for sale clothing brand name name, PoshMark is a possible option with a great Creatslist alternative, available in the U.S. and Canada, especially if it's valued at about $500 USD. You list your items and when sold, PoshMark sends you a pre-paid, pre-addressed label. If the item under $500 marks it goes directly to the buyer. If it's over $500, it goes to PoshMark where they will authentic the item. If it passes the authentication, then it is sent to the buyer. They use a conditional-style payment method. The payment is made in PoshMark and when the customer receives the order, the payment is released to you. This protects both you and the customer. Vinted – Website – Google Play – App Stores another great place to sell your clothes instead of Craigslist is Vinted. Based in Europe, Vinted is available in Spain, France, Luxembourg, Belgium, the Netherlands, Germany, Austria, the Czech Republic, Poland, Lithuania, the UK, and the USA. Currently, the markets are about 25 million users. As the traveler, you set the price. There are no sale fees, but you'll want to build at the cost of shipping. Vinted can provide you with a USPS shipping label so the shipment can be followed. Payments made vinted and went to conditional systems called Vinted Wallets. Once the buyer gets the item and agrees that it's good, the money becomes available in the wallet. If the buyer doesn't hit the button, the currency still gets released 2 days after delivery. You can use the money in the wallet to buy other stuff on Vinted. Or, you can get it paid out of your bank account. It will show up in your account after 3-4 business days. Carousell - Website - Google Play - App Store Targeted More in the Pacific Carousell operates in Hong Kong, Australia, India, Singapore, Taiwan, the Philippines, New Zealand, and Canada. Carousell is a Craigslist place market alternative for items in the home, car, clothing, and even lodging and rental. Maybe you can rent your car? You can list your items for free. If you want to use the Spotlight or Boost to promote your items, you can pay more fees. These programs seem a bit complicated to make sure you understand them. Shipping and how the customer pays you is between you and the buyer. VarageSale - Website - Google Play - App Store As the name suggests, VarageSale is like your own online garage sale. Operate around the world, and open the sale of all kinds of items to people in your community. You join your community on VarageSale, connect it to your Facebook account so you can verify, then start selling. Every community has an administrator to help make sure things go smoothly and safe. Everyone on VarageSale has to use their real names and pictures. The lists are free, too. It's up to you and the buyer to determine how payment and delivery is made. ThredUp – Website – Google Play – App Store for people with clothes in sale and can't be bothered and waiting to get a premium price, there's thirdUp. It functions on a design model, and it serves the U.S. and Canada. You ask a clean abyss from the third, put your clothes on you, send it back to them. From there, twadUp inspects it, takes photos and lists it. If it's something that one of the detailed partners wants, twadUp will buy it from you. It won't hit the site. If it goes to the site, you have 12 hours to edit the price. Then it goes up for a 12-hour period. If it is not sold during a 60 period or 90 day period, you may have it sent back at your own price. Or forget about her and her third claim. The 60 day period applies to most items, 90 days premium items. If you are not interested in selling the twadUp process, you can request a Bag Donation to send the items. twadUp will donate $5 on your behalf to whatever charity partner you choose. A tax receipt will be sent to you. Seems like a lot of work when there are so many local charities that will be happy to take your donation too. Instagram - Website - Google Play - App Store Perhaps the least obvious option, Instagram might be the right way for you to sell some things. It doesn't set up to make selling things easier, but it can, and it is, done. Inserting a picture on Instagram is about as easy as can. Then write a description, hashtag it as #forsale, maybe post an asking price and have people DM you. This might be the Craigslist alternative option for you if you have followers who would be very interested. Maybe you have a lot of local followers, or maybe you're a goodbye person and have a lot of followers who are babag people. It could be a custom-made market. Get sold, Get paid! Now that you know your Craigslist alternatives, what will you sell? where is think you're going to sell it? Have you had any retail experience of any of these methods? How about other options? We'd love to hear from you. you.
